Tactical Missiles: Issues Concerning the Navys Requirements Determination Process: Nsiad-90-233

By -

Bibliogov. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 22 pages. Dimensions: 9.7in. x 7.4in. x 0.1in.Pursuant to a congressional request, GAO examined the Navys requirements determination process for the Standoff Land Attack Missile (SLAM), the Advanced Interdiction Weapon System (AIWS), and the Standard Missile II Block IV System (AEGIS ER). GAO found that: (1) the Navy inconsistently adhered to the Office of the Secretary of Defense and its own guidance in determining requirements for the three reviewed systems; (2) records frequently had unapproved or missing key requirements documents; (3) the Navy did not always clearly document the inventory objectives process, making it impossible to quantitatively match inventory objectives to military requirements; (4) the Navy did not consistently follow procedures for establishing requirements or setting inventory objectives for the three systems; (5) the Navys process for determining SLAM inventory objectives was unclear and predicated largely on assumptions and military judgments; (6) the stated operational capabilities for the baseline AIWS could differ from actual capabilities, thus rendering key requirements documentation misleading; (7) the AEGIS ER could proceed to production without an approved operational requirement or other required documentation and formal agency approval; (8) the Navy reported general satisfaction...
