Createspace, United States, 2011. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Large Print. 279 x 216 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . You can make your feature film even with very little money. The author's first feature film KNAPTID: 4 DAYS AFTER THE FIRST ABDUCTION was made with a minuscule budget of $6,000. This budget went almost entirely to actor's salaries. If you can find actors to work for nothing, or who are willing to defer their salaries, you could make your feature film for much less. This book describes with detailed example how you can make your movie on an almost non-existent budget. It discusses everything you need to know from getting or writing a great story to dealing with actors. It gives guidelines to choosing and obtaining equipment rather than going in depth on specific equipment which due to today's rapidly advancing technology may be outdated tomorrow. It discusses the important issues you as a filmmaker need to know. Do you need workman's comp? How do you plan to shoot your movie? Do you always have to have permission? (The author describes how making his first short film--a film that was the number one most-watched online-video during Fox's On the Lot show--involved sneaking cast and crew into a city cemetery.) If you feel intimidated because you don't know how to: Decide what scenes to shoot and in what order? How to deal with problem actors? How to cope if everything seems to be going wrong? Don't be. The examples in this book will help you and guide you on your way to your own independent film. Says the author, There are many great books out there on movie making, but I found that I didn't seem...
