The leading inhabitants of the city - European as well as Native - had assembled at the pier to give him a welcome suited to his dignity, and the Municipal Corporation presented him with an address. After staying three days in the capital of Western India, spending his time in making himself acquainted with the people and the city, and in visiting its many noble institutions for the promotion of literature, science and art. Lord Lansdowne proceeded to Calcutta. On the ninth of December His Lordship took over charge of the Indian Empire.
