Good electronic book and useful one. It usually does not expense a lot of. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 34 pages. Original publisher: Washington, D. C. : U. S. Dept. of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics, Office of Productivity and Technology, 2005 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)213482681 Subject: Retirement -- United States. Excerpt: . . . Table 7 reports first transitions of respondents by health insurance status on their FTC jobs. Because individuals aged 65 and older are eligible for Medicare, the sample in Table 7 includes only those who are younger than 65 in 2002. We find that men and women who have no health insurance on their FTC job are most likely to take a bridge job if they leave their career job, as 78 percent of these uninsured men and 74 percent of the women did. Also, both men and women who lose health insurance coverage when leaving a 13 FTC job are more likely to exit the labor force completely than other workers in the sample. Men with defined-benefit ( DB ) pension plans, which often contain age-specific financial incentives to leave the job, are less likely to remain on their FTC jobs in 2002 than others, are more likely to have left the labor force, and are least likely to move to a bridge job when a transition is made. As seen in Table 8, men with no pension or with DC plans only on their FTC jobs are more likely to remain on that job than are men with a DB plan. While only 41 percent of males who left a career job with a DB pension take a bridge job, nearly 60 percent of their counterparts with no pension and 54...
