Judas as being next to Peter. 1Looked one upon another. --This must have been after the Is it I, Lord which received no answer from Him. doubting. --There must have been a suspicion of the real culprit in some of their minds, although charity forbade them to express it. sWhom Jesus loved. --Thus does S. John love to describe himself. How dearly he cherished that privilege; and he was the last of the Apostles to be taken to heaven. Beckoned to him. --He first calls Johns attention from his absorbed communing with our Lord. sWho is it--Peter may have divined something from the coolness or the deathlike want of expression on the face of Judas. Lord, who is it--John asks the question just as he is requested. Our Lord tells him by signal who it is, and Peter hears the news. We know from what followed...
